Listing of Papers on High-Temperature Superconductivity

The past few months have witnessed unprecedented rapid and dramatic developments in the field of high-temperature superconductivity. These have resulted in the publication of many papers, by many groups of authors. Because of the proliferation of new information, we suspect that interested readers may be having difficulty keeping track of all relevant work. As a service, we provide in the back of this issue a list of papers recently published in this area by Physical Review Letters and Physical Review B. Additional listings will appear as needs indicate.
